The Christmas season has officially begun in Hancock County, with holiday parades in Bay St. Louis, Waveland, Diamondhead, Pearlinton and Bayside Park.

The Bay kicked things off this past Saturday. Hundreds of people packed into Old Town Bay St. Louis on Saturday for the fifth annual Christmas in the Bay parade and tree lighting ceremony.

"This is just a great turn-out," Mayor Mike Favre said during the event.

STARFISH CAFE THRIVING IN NEW LOCATION

BY CASSANDRA FAVRE
STAFF WRITER

Much like its namesake, the Starfish Cafe in Bay St. Louis has regenerated into a larger — but still familiar — and brightly colored version of itself.

Starfish Cafe was born on Main Street in June 2013 and operated as an experiential restaurant learning program for students ages 18-30.

The Main Street location closed when COVID-19 hit in 2020, Executive Director, Zac

Fillhart said.

Hancock Chamber Education Committee Awards $10,000 in Classroom Grants for Educators

Gives thanks to educators during the Teacher Appreciation Dinner with $2,000 in door prizes

SPECIAL TO THE ECHO

During the 2023 Teacher Appreciation Dinner, sponsored by the Hancock Chamber Education Committee, close to 300 educators attended the event held at the Bay St. Louis Community Center. During the event, committee chair, Dr. Ramunda Barnes of PRCC, announced the recipients of the “Make A Difference” classroom grants. This year, the committee received 41 grant applications from 15 schools. From this group of applicants, they were able to fund 24 grants--twice as many as funded in 2021. Since 2009, the Hancock Chamber Education Committee has funded 149 grants totaling $64,518 serving 14,592 students. Educators also received more than $2,000 in door prizes to show thanks from the community for their work throughout the year. The highlight of the night was the Boston Butt give-away sponsored by the Hancock Resource Center prepared by Noel Grafe of The First.

“None of this would be possible without the support the 30-member committee received from 16 Hancock Chamber member sponsors,” said Tish Williams, executive director of the Hancock of misdemeanor shoplifting, one for Aug. 1 for $25.24; and one on Aug. 15 for $51.25.

Under the terms of the plea agreement worked out between Waveland prosecutor pro tempore Nathan Ryne Hand and defense attorney Tim C. Holleman and entered in Waveland Municipal Court, Necaise was sentenced to one year of probation and must pay restitution of $585.75 and court costs.

Necaise is also permanently banned from the Waveland Walmart.

Hoda also ruled she must undergo one year of counseling — or at least until the counselor determines she needs no more counseling — and that she will “serve six months if she fails to meet any of the conditions of her probation,” Hand said.

“This is one of those cases we looked at seriously defending,” Holleman said, “but it would have taken a year or more.”

Considering the “negative comments” Necaise had to deal with on social media, Holleman said, his client determined it was best to just plead “no contest” and move on with her life.

“To quote my father Boyce Holleman,” he said, “it’s not making a mistake that determines someone’s character, it’s what you do after that mistake to correct it that shows good character. My client is a good person.”

“These self-checkout things are a new issue,” Holleman said, remarking that he’s had problems with them himself, and has noticed store employees also had difficulty with them. “It’s not something that’s an exact science by any means, and people need to be careful with them.”

“When they put out the reopening guidelines, with the building that we had down there, we were only going to be able to have three tables and meet their requirements for the six-foot distancing,” he said. “We met with our accountant and we met with the board and the decision was made to move because nobody knew when things were going to be back to normal.”

Di Fillhart, director of program development, said they started looking around for a building that was formerly a restaurant.

“So, that’s how we ended up here,” she said.

The new location is on Highway 603 in Bay St. Louis.

They opened in June 2021 and two weeks later, Zac’s dad passed away and they traveled to New York for a six-week stay.

“So then we really reopened in September of 2021,” Zac said.

Then they were closed the months of January and February of 2022 due to staff illnesses.

Then they had to close at the end of 2022 because Zac had to have bilateral carpal tunnel surgery.

“I was finally able to come back to work the beginning of this summer,” he said.

Sea Stars or Starfish Fun Fact #2

“On each of a sea star’s five arms, the bottom side of the limb presents a peculiar yet extraordinary feature. Each arm contains up to 15,000 tiny little feet, ‘tube feet,’ which are able to orchestrate movements that ‘walk’ the sea star along..often quite efficiently. They contain a potent glue-like substance, which can secure the sea star to objects like rocks so that they don’t fall off or get washed way with the tide.” — Source www.oceanconservancy.org.

The Starfish Cafe operates differently than how it did on Main Street, which included “pay what you want.”

“We decided that was not going to work in the present culture of food,” Di said. “We just set prices in place that are kind of along the lines that everyone else is doing.”

There is an apprentice in the kitchen who started in June. There have been three students who have come through the program and graduated, Zac said.

This fall, they opened up a trades training program, which is located downstairs. The restaurant is upstairs.

“We do plumbing, electrical, construction/general carpentry, and then I have plans to do HVAC as well once I can find an instructor for it,” Zac said. “The instructors we have are professionals who are currently working in the field, so they’re up to date with all the new stuff that’s going on. We’ve kind of shifted our focus into doing a lot of workforce development. We’ve always done the culinary and hospitality thing, because it’s a huge industry on the coast, and the trades are just kind of dying as far as getting people to work in them.”

Di said Zac talked to people in the trades and found out their needs.

“Basically, what they really wanted was when somebody came in the door for a job and they have the basic understanding of the tools and what the job means, their consensus was, if they just have the basics of what the tools are, what the industry is and get the basics, they can train them,” Di said.

Zac said the goal of the trades program is not to make electricians and plumbers, but to make a “very well qualified helper to go into a company and learn the trade, but be an asset that the company doesn’t have to spend six months teaching them.”

For the first two weeks of the trades program, participants work on tools of the trade, Zac said, which is an introduction to the trades as a job and basic tools such as tape measures, saws, screwdrivers, hammers, etc.

Students have to have a job in order to take the trades program.

“Turn your job into a career,” Zac said. “They wanted people that already knew how to show up to work. They don’t want to have to deal with soft skills to train somebody. They want someone that already knows how to do that. That was where our stance came in, is if you already have a job and can keep a job, then we’ll just teach you these other few things to give you a leg up.”

The trades program does have a fee. The application fee is $50, which includes the first two weeks, tools of the trade. Once participants decide on a course, it’s $50 a week.

Interested parties can sign up for the trades program at www.starfishcafesbl.com.

They also opened the Mary Kay Deen Education Center, which is a community education room to honor the Starfish Cafe’s first Mississippi board member.

“The space is open to anyone who would like to share their wisdom and their talents to people in the community that are interested,” Di said. “So, whether it’s financial literacy, whether it’s meditation, whether it’s yoga, it doesn’t really matter. It’s just giving a platform so people can give back into the community what they have.”

The only thing they ask in return for use of the center is that people make a donation to help cover the cost of the utilities, Di said, but it’s not mandatory.

The decor of the Starfish Cafe matches that of its Main Street location. The Fillharts used the same tables, chairs, and decor to keep that familiar feeling.

Some of the classes may have a course fee to cover the costs of materials, Zac added.

They also offer the free culinary program, which lasts about 6 to 12 weeks.

“If they’re going to be ServSafe certified, it’s 12 weeks,” Di said. “Not just to be able to pass the test, but be able to use the information.”

Students work 20 hours a week, Zac said, get a travel stipend and get money that is placed into a work incentive fund for shoes, uniforms, and maybe a bike to ride to work.

“It’s money in their pocket to get back and forth to work,” Di said. “And then at the end of it, they have enough money to start whatever new job they need.”

Sea Stars or Starfish Fun Fact #3

“The anatomy of a sea star’s digestive system.. has an incredibly unique two-part stomach system. Here’s what happens during the digestive process: first, a sea star moves its entire body on top of its prey, so that its mouth is centered on the organism of choice. It will then use its sac-like cardiac stomach to ooze digestive enzymes onto their prey. Once the flesh of the prey is broken down enough, the second stomach engulf the prey to complete digestion.” — Source www.oceanconservancy.org.

They have recently switched to their fall/winter menu.

“We still stay to our roots,” Di said.

There is a section dubbed “Chef Zac’s Inspirations,” which changes every two weeks.

They also offer community cooking classes and costs depend on what type of class it is, Di said.

“This is engaging the community and meeting needs that people want and education,” she said.

Di said her son’s love of cooking began when he was five.

“It really did,” she said.

Zac said his mother ran a camp and retreat center where his chores included washing dishes and cutting tomatoes, etc.

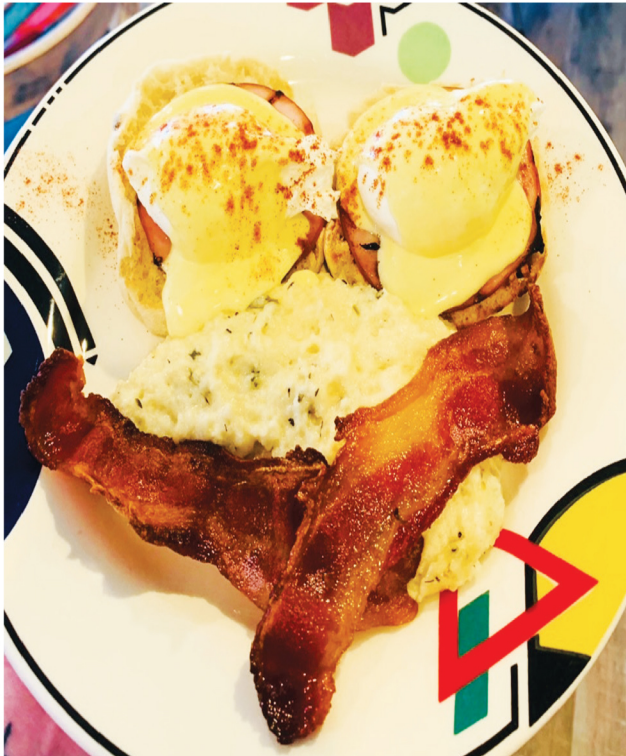

“Literally in a commercial kitchen at five,” he added.

Di chimed in, “he could slice a tomato at five years old.”

He started working in kitchens in New York at the age of 16.

“By the time I was 19, I ran my first restaurant in Woodbridge, New Jersey,” he said. “It was a Brdecka added, "December is a time for the library system to show its appreciation to its patrons and all of those individuals, organizations, and businesses who support the library's mission throughout the year. We use the Holiday Tree Celebration to shine special recognition on the Library Foundation of Hancock County, which provides the funding that makes this event possible. We hope that as the year comes to a close, people remember to support the Library Foundation through thoughtful donations."

Following the Sunday opening in Bay St. Louis, the Kiln Library branch will hold its public reception and Open House on Tuesday, December 5, from 6:00 PM to 7:30 PM. Santa will also be present for photos with children.

A Home for Velvet

As we bid farewell to November, the month where thankfulness seems to be at the forefront, I’m especially grateful for animal rescuers.

About three weeks ago, a close relative of mine passed away. She was a larger-than-life person with a dazzling personality who charmed everyone she met. She loved to laugh, have a good time, loved giving presents to her most dear, and had a stubbornness that would rival even mine.

We are still processing the loss and will feel the weight of grief for some time to come. Also, I want to remind everyone that there is no — nor should there be — a timeline for grieving. It hits in the most unexpected of places, a parking lot, or the backseat of my car where pieces of green glitter from a sweater she wore one Christmas years ago still remind me of her sparkling personality.

However, there is one little being who has felt her loss the most, her beloved dog, Velvet.

That first night, Velvet kept looking for her owner. She would look at us, then the driveway, as if to ask when her owner would be home.

I knew my first order of business would be to find her a good home. I have three cats and do not have the space a dog her size would require, so sadly, could not take her.

She is a chow/Border Collie mix. She is fluffy and beautiful and was very attached to her owner.

So, I went on the hunt for a new home. I called the shelters, which weren’t taking in surrenders and I reached out to several people who dabble in animal fostering and rescue.

One dear friend posted Velvet’s pictures on her Facebook page and lo and behold, I met a man named George who knows the breed very well and is skilled in rescue, rehoming, and has quite a few animals himself.

The moment I spoke to him on the phone, I knew he was the one. The next task was trying to convince Velvet of that.

The first attempt didn’t go so well. She wouldn’t come anywhere near any of us and knew something was up.

My relative’s wonderful neighbor helped with more efforts over the next few days. She was feeding her and Sam the cat, who also misses his owner, but will have a new home next door.

Hancock History:
THE BEE’S KNEES

In the Colonial Period in Hancock County history, honey bees were shipped from France and Spain because they are not native to the Western Hemisphere. There is recorded history of honey bees in Natchez, Mississippi as early as 1770. Early bee hives contained honey combs that could not be removed or manipulated like the movable combs of today. Black gum tree sections were used to house the hives and the term “bee gums” was in common-place usage. In Hancock County beekeeping was commonly practiced in most every household, both in the rural farms but also in the villages like Pearlinton and Bay St. Louis. The production of honey was at best intended for each farm family’s own needs. Box hives in the mid-1800’s allowed farmers to remove the combs of honey without killing the whole colony of bees. Modern movable comb hives allow local beekeepers to produce larger amounts of honey and sell the honey commercially.

A hogshead was a medium size barrel or cast employed in the commercial transport of certain liquids or food products. In earlier times, barrels were the vehicle that were used to store substances such as honey, wine, whiskey, rum, sugar, tobacco, salt, gunpowder, and fish. In the local New Orleans newspapers, the numbers of hogshead barrels were listed of various cargo like salted pork that were moved from the docks to the ships, documenting the activity of the port. A hogshead was used as a measurement for sugar in Louisiana for most of the Nineteenth Century. A few Hancock County farmers raised small patches of sugar cane. Early mills in Santa Rosa and Pearlinton wood grind sugar cane into molasses which could be later converted into brown sugar. These primitive mills would also grind cotton, corn, and wheat. However, Gulf Coast farm families mostly preferred honey to cane sugar and used honey to sweeten beverages such as tea and coffee as well as a key ingredient in cooking. Favorite Southern receipts included honey in cornbread, cereal, pastries, ham, barbecue sauce, sweet potatoes, squash, and deserts.

Local beekeepers sell pure, filtered honey in small glass jars at the Farmer’s Market on Longfellow Drive in Waveland. Bob Fricke (b. 1943) owns and operates The Bee Hive business that offers “Raw

Conservation Corner:
THE FEDERAL AID IN WILDLIFE RESTORATION ACT

Most everyone knows that wildlife conservation in Mississippi and the country is largely funded by hunters. However, based on recent efforts in the U.S. House of Representatives to dismantle these policies, it has become clear that some folks outside of our community aren’t familiar with the importance of the Pittman-Robertson Act.

Members of the Boone and Crockett Club across the country built a system of wildlife conservation funding for states that has stood, largely intact, for over 85 years. Driven by the Pittman-Robertson Federal Aid in Wildlife Restoration program, this system works by levying a federal excise tax on firearms, ammunition, and archery equipment. Those funds are then matched with monies generated from the sale of hunting licenses at the state level. These funds, and those derived from the Dingell-Johnson Federal Aid in Sport Fish Restoration Act, make up most of the American system of conservation funding and are used to make robust investments in wildlife habitat, research, and active restoration activities. These funds make up a significant amount of dedicated revenue for state fish and wildlife agencies every year.

In the mid-1930s, President Franklin D. Roosevelt convened a blue-ribbon panel on wildlife conservation to address massive declines in some of our country’s most charismatic wildlife species. Hunters were named members of this panel and were taxed with developing a solution to the problem. One recommendation of this group led to the writing and passage of the Federal Aid in Wildlife Restoration Act. Commonly referred to as the Pittman-Robertson Act, after its sponsors Senator Key Pittman of Nevada (who was born in Vicksburg) and Congressman A. Willis Robertson of Virginia.

Signed into law on September 2, 1937, the Pittman-Robertson Act levies an 11% federal excise tax on sporting arms, archery equipment, and ammunition and a 10% tax on handguns. Each state’s apportionment is determined by considering the total area of the state and the number of licensed hunters in that state.

Of the funds available to the states, more than 60% is used to buy, develop, and maintain wildlife management areas. Over 4 million acres have been purchased outright since the program began, and nearly 40 million acres are managed for wildlife under agreements with other landowners. That is an area almost the size of Mississippi and Alabama

The Federal Aid in Wildlife Restoration Act is a pivotal part of paying for wildlife management in this country. It is vital to conservation and promotes the health of our nation’s diverse wildlife habitat.

gus Fricke (1913-2005). They are buried in the Cedar Rest Cemetery in Bay St. Louis. They reared twelve children. The Fricke Family ran a herd of approximately one hundred cows and grew almost everything they ate. On their farm they raised pigs, turkeys, geese, ducks, and chickens.

Bob Fricke praises the medicinal benefits of local, raw honey. This science of immunity to allergies is based on the local pollen that causes humans to get respiratory ailments such as hay fever. The honeybee extracts that same pollen and flies back to his beehive and this allergen (pollen) is incorporated into the honey. The oral consumption by a patient is equivalent to an oral vaccine. Thus, introduced into a human, his or her immune system creates specific antibodies to that local pollen. Honey is also successful as a salve for skin cuts and abrasions.

The term “the bee’s knees” was popular during the Flapper Age in the 1920’s in the United States and England. A similar phrase is the “cat’s meow.” When you refer to something as the “bee’s knees” it means that it is of excellent or very high quality.

They tried feeding her in large cages in hopes of getting her to stay in there so we could get a leash on her, but to no avail.

So, last Saturday, I armed myself with several sausage biscuits from McDonalds. I also brought pancakes, but Velvet does not like those, she prefers the ones I brought her from the Buttercup the weekend before. So do I, Velvet, so do I.

George met me up there and she followed me in the home and there we stayed for the next few hours, sharing sausage biscuits.

After awhile, she still wasn’t keen on the idea of having a leash put on. And she had started to follow me around as well. The two of us quickly formed quite the bond. Although she still wasn’t in agreement with my plan for her new adventure, so she kept me close, but not too close.

George brought a couple of sedatives and after about two hours of Velvet fighting those, she calmed enough to put a leash on her and after a few minutes of getting used to it, got in his car. She climbed in the passenger seat and looked almost happy.

It was my turn to be the blubbering mess. As they started to drive away, I couldn’t hold back the tears. I was thankful for George for giving her a second chance at a loving home. I was sad to see her go, because she was such a sweet dog, and it was another moment of finality that comes with the passing of a loved one.

I know that her owner would want her to have a loving home and I was determined to make it happen.

On Sunday, I received two pictures of Velvet who looked happy, calmer, and loved already.

I’m so thankful for people like George who care for the animals in the way that they do. During our hours-long journey on Saturday, he spoke to me about his recent rescue adventures and the fact that he had just put down one of his dogs due to cancer.

And just maybe, Velvet came along for him at the right time, to help each other heal from their great losses.

With time, I am confident that Velvet will thrive in her new surroundings. It’s one of those feelings I have in my bones and gut.

I’m thankful for the wonderful neighbor who helped bring this to fruition, as well. She too has a deep love for the animals and we have also bonded over our love for cats, among other interests.

While this loss is painful, there are moments for smiles and happy tears as well. Contrary to popular beliefs about us realists, I do love a happy ending, which is what Velvet got and deserved.

Thank you to all those who helped me fulfill this wish and work tirelessly every day to enrich the lives of animals and provide them with loving homes.

Bartholomew “Bart” Carr

Bartholomew “Bart” Carr passed away on November 20, 2023, at the age of 77. Bart was known to many as “Coach Carr.”

He married Brenda Gail Rayborn Carr on July 21, 1972.

Bart graduated from St. Stanislaus in 1965 and from the University of Southern Mississippi in 1974.

Coach Carr started his coaching career at Our Lady Academy in Bay St. Louis in 1974 and St. Clare in 1975. He also spent several years coaching football, among other sports, in Harrison County at both Pineville Elementary and North Gulfport. In 1984, Bart took his talents to Sixth Ward Junior High in Pearl River, La.

In 1985, Bart was called up to the big leagues to teach and coach at Boyet Junior High in Slidell, retiring in 2006. During his 21-year career coaching football at Boyet, he led the school to numerous parish championships, undefeated seasons, and even an undefeated and unscored-on season in 1996. Bart’s humor, dry wit, and sense of fairness touched the lives of thousands of students, educators, and friends throughout the years.

Bart was an avid golfer and member of Pass Christian Isles Golf Club. He consistently scored his age and 13 holes-in-one over his lifetime. Bart was a born again Christian and a member of First Baptist Church of Bay St. Louis.

He was preceded in death by his mother Jessie Edith Spotorno Travirca, sisters Barbara Perron and Martha Lawson, and brother Waymon Carr. Bart is survived by his wife Gail Carr, sisters Lilian Hartgrove and Cynthia Brunet, sons: Chris Carr (Stacy), Brian Carr (Ashley), Cory Carr (Jenny), and Brett Carr (Morgan), as well as five grandchildren: Chandler, Nora, McKenzie, Dawson, and Davis.

Bart’s family would like to extend sincere gratitude to the numerous doctors, nurses, and other providers, especially those at Mississippi HomeCare and his personal care giver Emily Jefcoat.

A memorial service was held on Saturday, November 25, 2023 at First Baptist Church, 141 Main Street, Bay St. Louis, MS. Visitation at 10 AM and service at 11.

In lieu of flowers, the family asks for donations to be made to First Baptist Church of Bay St. Louis.

Edmond Fahey Funeral Home is honored to serve the family of Bart Carr.

Library System seeks artists for return of FanFest

SPECIAL TO THE ECHO

After the booming success of last April’s return of the Hancock County Library System’s version of a comic con on the Gulf Coast, the HCLS will once again present the day-long free event which saw nearly 1000 people pass through the Bay St. Louis Community Hall venue.

The area’s library system is seeking original art that features wide-ranging Pop Culture themes from local Hancock County artists to be displayed and used in various ways during the FAN-FEST event. Last year’s winners had their artwork reproduced on the cover of the event program, while another image was used as the design for the collectible FANFEST t-shirt.

Applications from artists — both young and old— are open for HCLS’s FANFEST 2024 art contest. The deadline for submissions is December 1, 2023. Original art submissions can be from Hancock County residents ages 12 and older. Individuals are invited to apply online at hcls.info/fan-fest. Art can be submitted via an electronic document (scanned version) or as an original, but all art entries are due by the December 1st deadline.

The HCLS FANFEST 2024 event will be held on Sunday, April 21, 2024, at Bay St. Louis Community Hall on Blaize Avenue in the Depot District. One of the many attractions for FAN-FEST is an art exhibition of all of the art submitted by area artists during the event’s art contest.

FAN-FEST is the display of fabulous art submitted by talented artists of all ages. FANFEST is one of the library’s most popular annual events—a mini-con where Pop-Culture fans celebrate comics, cosplay, super heroes, high tech gaming, and more. The FAN-FEST art contest is an opportunity for illustrators to showcase their work and ideas, especially in the realm of comics and manga. Winners will be featured on promotional material for the event, including the event guidebook and commemorative t-shirt. Submissions should be the original work and sent to the library as a digital image file. Instructions for submitting artist designs are in the online application.

For full details and more information about the art contest and ways to participate in FANFEST persons can visit the HCLS web site at hcls.info/fan-fest.

safety, please avoid the area if at all possible.”

The inmate was 42-year-old Maurice, La.-resident Kelli Palermo, who was initially arrested in Hancock County on Oct. 18 for a probation violation, jail records show.

Palermo was recaptured last Tuesday in the Lake Charles area.

“Part of the rehabilitation process is transitioning inmates to a worker status and there are times that inmates demonstrate that they are not yet capable of maintaining our trust,” Adam said. “In Kelli’s case, she now has a lot bigger problem on her hands and she will have to work twice as hard to work her way out of the criminal justice system.”

Palermo was extradited back to the Hancock County Jail.

In addition to recapturing Palermo, Adam said, “we are pleased to announce the arrest of Larry Glen Holland of Beaumont, Texas who is being charged as an Accessory After the Fact for his role in aiding the escape of Palermo.

“We would like to extend our deepest appreciation to the U.S. Marshal’s Gulf Coast Regional Fugitive Task Force out of Gulfport, the Western Louisiana U.S. Marshal’s out of the Lafayette and Lake Charles Office, and Sheriff Tony Mancuso and the Calcasieu Parish Sheriff’s Office for all of their assistance in returning Palermo to custody and bringing her accomplice to justice.”

Adam said the resolution of the investigation “further exemplifies the great teamwork happening in our office and with our surrounding law enforcement partners on the federal level. I couldn’t be more pleased at the fine work that was done by all involved to lead to Palermo and Holland’s arrests.”

Advent One

By REV. C. GERALD RICHARDSON, D. MIN

C. Gerald Richardson, D. MIN.

The Christian church is entering the liturgical season of Advent. This is the time when Christians around the world observe a period of holy expectation awaiting the coming of the promised messiah.

This is not a season which appears in scripture. It is a practice which was developed by the early church.

It is intended to enhance the observance of the birth of Christ and its celebration by the faithful. Advent has been part of Christian spirituality for most of the life of the faith. There is profound spiritual meaning in this beautiful season. It serves as a period of remembrance and preparation, and it calls us to reflect upon our own unique and individual spiritual experiences. Advent may be, and often is, observed corporately in the church or in small groups. It can also be a personal means of self awareness and interior evaluation of that which is deep within us.

Advent is not Christmas. It is a time to prepare and prayerfully consider our lives in light of the teachings of the faith which Christmas introduced into the world.

It can be a time of personal growth which can sustain us and offer a measure of peace amid our harried lives.

What are the differences which these teachings can make in the world? The following suggestions may offer a reminder.

* They call us to a life of love and forgiveness.

*They challenge us to strive to live in harmony with others and with the whole of creation.

*They proclaim hope and point us toward it, even when much of the world seems out of control.

*They declare that there is an alternative to the hostility and revenge which are so dominate in the world.

Too often we allow religion, rules, and doctrinal differences to get in the way of the power of the season. Advent is not intended to be a check on correct theology. It is not a time to get bogged down in diverse biblical interpretations.

It is not a license to sit in judgment on those who see the faith in a different way than ourselves. It is a time to prepare to receive the gifts of love and grace which hold the potential to enrich our lives and the lives of those around us.

It is not an obligation or a duty. It is an opportunity. May each of us ponder these possibilities as we prepare for the holy birth.

SHORE THING: WILL WORK FOR FOOD

Shore Thing Fishing Report BY CPT. SONNY SCHINDLER

Many people fish for food, and many people fish for fun. Personally, I think it's best to do a little of both. The food part does play a big role in most fishing trips. Sometimes it is the fish we catch, and sometimes it is the food we bring to eat on the trip.

I have been fishing and eating with the Forshag family for almost 2 decades now. In the early 2000s Casey Forshag used to work on an offshore boat with me, during his summers off from LSU. Whenever possible, he would stop off at his mom's house in Metairie and get us bags of homemade beef jerky and trail mix. I am convinced that Mrs Lisa's treats kept us alive down there in Venice LA. Due to an uncertain schedule, long hours offshore and poor planning on our part, we were always in need of food.

These last few months, Casey's dad, Mr. Kurt has been coming fishing with me regularly. Keeping the tradition alive, he always brings something good from Mrs Lisa's kitchen. Our last 2 trips were fantastic in many ways. We were able to get in on some fabulous speckled trout action, and some amazing food too. Of course, the regular junk food was well represented. We had plenty of sandwiches, chips, cookies, and drinks. However, she has been sending these homemade granola bars, that are out of this world. There were several times during and every cast trout bite that I would stop and eat these treats.

I get in a bad habit of not eating enough while I'm out on the water, but that is never the case on a Forshag trip. I think I actually skipped dinner after both of their trips, because I was so full from eating all day.

Adding more fun to our trips, the Forshag's are always generous with their catch. Rarely do I take home fish from a charter that I'm running.

We did exceptionally well on our last trip, and I knew I had family coming in for the holidays. I gladly took half a bag of fresh speckled trout when they offered. We were able to bring the fresh speckled trout to The Blind Tiger, in downtown Bay St. Louis. As usual, my outta town family was blown away with the way they prepared our fresh catch. We opted for the taco option with our fresh fish fried and blackened. Painfully delicious I tell you.

I always enjoy my trips with the Forshag's. They are all incredible anglers, and wonderful people. Most of the time it doesn't feel like I'm even at work. I love doing what I do, especially when it's with great folks like them, but even still... I WILL WORK FOR FOOD.

We had a pumpkin decorating contest that started October 17th and ran through October 26th. The pumpkins were displayed at the Diamondhead Clubhouse and to vote on a pumpkin you would put a dollar in it's box. The money was raised to support girls golf in Hancock County. We are happy to say we raised $1,215. We wanted to support girls golf because golf is a sport that can carry you through your whole life. In our small group of 44 players we have three ladies who are in their eighties and we are very proud of them.
